

2022 Grady-White Canyon 336 review

The Grady-White Canyon 336 centre console is an excellent platform for boat owners who are serious about their fishing

Grady-White is a name synonymous with excellence. One of the world's top fishing boat brands the American fiberglass boat builder has not so much reinvented the wheel with its latest Canyon 336, but has set a new benchmark that competitors will find tough to meet.

The Grady-White Canyon 336 is a US-built centre console fishing boat with a lot of heritage behind it. Introduced in 2006, and recently updated, it gives dedicated fishers a beamy platform with heaps of cockpit space, a proper rigging station and one of the best helms in the business.

Made in the south-eastern US state of North Carolina, Grady-White epitomises the Carolina flare design with a sharp bow that turns out impressively and provides generous wave slicing ability all the way to the stern.

You do not build a reputation like Grady-White with no proof in the pudding. The Canyon 336's design and execution are class leading. The ride, something to behold in all conditions.

Indeed, with the latest updates to the Canyon 336, Grady-White has widened the appeal, and in some cases the gap, over other manufacturers. This is a boat for the genuine fishing nut who wants to fish with the best.
