Passion for Grady-White Boats Extends to Family and Friends

After years of boating with one another on a series of different boat brands, Dan Langdon and his father, Dean, decided to buy a boat together. Looking for something more reliable for offshore fishing along the Delaware coast, they did their research before purchasing a Grady-White Seafarer 22. Their first ride on the new boat instantly began a love affair with Grady-White boats that has lasted for nearly 35 years. Today, that same Grady-love extends to Dan's brother, children, nephews, and neighbors who all also own Grady-Whites. Here's why they all wholeheartedly say, "Get the Grady!"

Need a Cushion Refresh?

Because Grady-White boats are built to last, we know lots of customers keep their boats for many years or have purchased pre-loved models. Long-term use and exposure to the elements often result in the need to re-cover the cushions.

Mike and Lori Bloom

Mike and Lori Bloom sold their boat of a different brand after a lackluster experience with its performance and the service they received. After building a house in Florida, they were ready to be boat owners again. This time, Mike did his research, and today they are loving The Grady Life. Here's why.
