Grady-White Canyon 326

The Grady-White Canyon 326 is a serious offshore center console fishing machine. Photo by Grady-White Boats.

It was a bit surprising when Grady-White introduced the Canyon 326 a few years back, since the builder already had another model very close in size, the 336. However, that boat is just large and heavy enough that it needs a pair of Yamaha F425 outboards or triple engines to perform up to Grady-White's standards. By shaving off a bit of size and weight, the 326 is able to run quite well with a pair of 4.3-liter Yamaha F350s and can hit 55 mph at top-end — yet gets 1.6-mpg at a 30-mph cruise. That makes it a superb value for its size in the world of offshore fishing boats and in 2025 it retains its spot on our list of top picks. Plus, as is true of all Grady-Whites, it checks the fishability box and scores high for comfort. The clincher: The 72-gallon fishbox in the transom is literally big enough to climb inside of. Note that this boat and the other center console models from Grady-White landed the builder a spot as one of our picks for Best Center Console Fishing Boat Manufacturers of 2025.
